

FREE TO PASS ON

mohamedabukhadra.com

Sometimes the dog was trained, but the house was not

A short read to give the families your members work with

FREE

TO SHARE
AS IT IS

Mohamed Abu Khadra

AUTHOR OF BEFORE YOU SAY YES TO THE DOG AND AFTER YOU SAY YES TO THE DOG

SYSTEM FIRST. PUPPY SECOND. FAMILY ALWAYS.

Something to give the families you work with

One sitting at a kitchen table. Longer than that and it does not get read, which is why it is this short.

You do good work with the dog. Then he goes home to a house where nobody was given a job, the words change from person to person, and the structure you built quietly comes apart between sessions.

That is not a training failure. It is a household one, and it is the gap this closes.

Free to your members, free for them to pass on, no permission needed. The only conditions are on the Terms page: do not sell it, do not cut it up, keep the author's name on it.

Everything from here is written for the family.

IN HERE

why a trained dog can still be an unmanageable household ♦ the house as a map — where he can be and where he cannot ♦ six systems the whole family runs the same way ♦ the words everyone uses, so he hears one voice

In my house it was Mum. In yours it could be anyone. Read it that way.

Why a trained dog can still be an unmanageable household

Here is the thing nobody warns you about. The dog that breaks a family is almost never an unloved one. It is the dog everyone wanted. The kids begged for him, the parents said yes, the whole house celebrated the day he arrived — and a few months later that same house is tense, tired, and quietly wondering what went wrong. Nobody saw it coming, because the family prepared for the wrong thing entirely. They prepared to love a puppy. They did not prepare to live with one. Sometimes the dog was trained, but the house was not.

A puppy will not live inside your dream of him. He will live inside your actual house, with its school mornings, work calls, tired parents, excited kids, open doors, visitors, food on the floor, accidents, and days when nobody has enough energy left to give. Love decides that you want him. It does not decide who cleans the accident at eleven at night, who controls the door when a delivery arrives, who ends the rough play before someone cries, or how Mum keeps their peace. Those things are not solved by loving harder. They are solved by a system — and a system is the one thing the dream never includes.

A puppy does not wait politely until the family feels ready. He does not wait for the trainer to come, for the parents to have time, for the children to calm down, or for Mum to relax. From his very first minute indoors, he is already learning — from the floor under his feet, the doors, the voices, and above all from whatever happens immediately after he does something.

This matters more than most families realize, because a trainer might visit once or twice a week, while the family lives with the puppy every single hour of every day. Daily life is the real teacher; the formal lessons are a footnote next to it. If the home he lands in is clear and consistent, he learns structure. If it is chaotic and contradictory, he learns chaos just as quickly and just as well. The house is always teaching. The only question is whether it is teaching on purpose.

The house as a map — where he can be and where he cannot

This is the quiet reason so many puppies start badly. It is not temperament and it is not stubbornness. It is that the puppy arrived into an open house with no idea where anything was supposed to happen, and a house he cannot read is a house he cannot behave in. Before he needs freedom, a puppy needs a map: where he sleeps, where he rests, where the toilet is, where play is allowed and where it is not, which rooms are not his, and which paths must always stay clear. Freedom comes later. The map comes first.

That is why zones matter, and why they are worth deciding deliberately. A zone is not merely a location; it is a message the puppy can actually read. One area means rest. Another means calm company with the family. One spot means the toilet. Certain rooms mean “not yours.” A doorway means stop and wait. The clearer these messages are, the faster the whole house makes sense to him — and a puppy to whom the house makes sense is a calmer animal than one left to guess.

Example House Zones

Area	Puppy Access	Why
Garden	Controlled access	Outdoor freedom still needs rules.
Living room	Supervised access	Family space must stay calm.
Comfort area for Mum	No access unless invited	Comfort boundaries protect the whole house.
Bedrooms	Usually off-limits	Sleep and personal space matter.
Kitchen	Limited or no access	Food, feet, and cleaning create risk.
Front gate / entry	Adults only	Gates and visitors are not a child’s job.

So freedom starts small and grows with proof. Begin with controlled space and close supervision, and widen his world step by step as he shows he can handle it. If accidents, chewing, or boundary-breaking start climbing, the freedom comes back down with them. That is not punishment. It is prevention, and it is the single most useful habit a family can keep in the first year.

Six systems the whole family runs the same way

This is one of the most common and least obvious ways a family makes a puppy harder to raise. It is not that they do too little. It is that they each do something slightly different, and the contradictions pile up until the puppy simply tunes out. A dog cannot follow six teachers giving six versions of the same instruction. What he can follow is a small, shared set of words that every person in the house uses the same way, every single time. That shared set is what this chapter builds.

These are the six systems the family uses every day.

System	Main Words	Purpose
1. Potty System	POTTY, GOOD BOY	Teach toilet place and timing
2. Rest System	BOX, GOOD BOY	Teach sleep, reset, and safe containment
3. Calm System	PLACE, GOOD BOY	Teach calm near family
4. Play System	GO PLAY, ALL DONE	Start and end play clearly
5. Safety System	SAFE, WAIT, BOX NOW	Protect Mum, doors, guests, and risky moments
6. Control System	LEAVE IT, DROP IT, COME	Stop unsafe choices and bring the puppy back

The family does not need to teach all words perfectly in one week. But the family should use the same meanings from day one.

So the family uses few words, says them calmly, and stands behind them. If the puppy is too excited to listen, the answer is to create distance or reset, not to pile on more words. If he does not understand, he is guided, not lectured. And when several people start talking at once, one person takes the moment and the others go quiet. The single most useful rule in this whole chapter is also the simplest: one puppy, one moment, one voice.

The words everyone uses, so he hears one voice

Same words. Same meaning. Every time.

Word	Meaning	Family Rule
GOOD BOY	That exact action was right; reward is coming	Say it exactly when the right behaviour happens. Do not say it randomly
POTTY	Go to the toilet, in the right place	Use at the potty area only. Same place, same word, same timing
BOX	Go to your safe resting place and settle	Safety, rest, reset. Routine, not punishment
PLACE	Be near the family, calmly	Calm near people. Reward calm lying and settling
GO PLAY	Play starts now	Play is allowed now
ALL DONE	Play or activity is finished	Stop clearly, then calm. The toy disappears
SAFE	Control the puppy first; someone needs space	Dad leads, kids respond. Mum can move
BOX NOW	Urgent safety command	No debate. No delay. Secure immediately
LEAVE IT	Do not touch that	Best before the puppy grabs it
DROP IT	Release what is in your mouth	Trade if safe
COME	Come to me	Use in safe, easy settings first
WAIT	Pause before moving	Use at doors, food, movement, gates later

The children's rule is: Say it once. Help him win. Call Dad if unsure.

Why this exists

I am not a dog trainer. I am not a vet, not a breeder, not a professional from the dog industry.

That may be exactly why this helps. None of it was written from theory or from a training room. It came out of real family failure and real household pressure.

I raised dogs before I had a family. I loved them, and I believed I knew what I was doing. Then, a few months after I married, my dog died, and I grieved him more than anyone who has never loved a dog would understand.

Years later I brought a dog into my family, and it failed. My wife had a real fear of dogs. My children loved the puppy and kept breaking the rules without meaning to. He learned one thing from me, another from the children, and something else again from the house. I rehomed him.

A few years later I thought the problem had been timing. The children were older. We were ready. We were not. Same failure — taller children, a different name, the same pattern.

A few years after that, it happened again.

Three dogs. Koudy, Milo and Snoopy. All three went on to families who could give them what mine could not. My children still see them.

Love was there. Experience was there. It failed anyway.

So I stopped asking why the dog had failed and started asking better questions. What repeated across all three? Where did it break? Who carried the risk, and who carried the daily routine? Who was being pushed into discomfort? What did the puppy learn from us without our noticing?

The answer was simple and uncomfortable. Love was present. A system was not.

Sometimes the dog was trained, but the house was not.

So I built one — on paper, for my own children, before the fourth dog arrived.

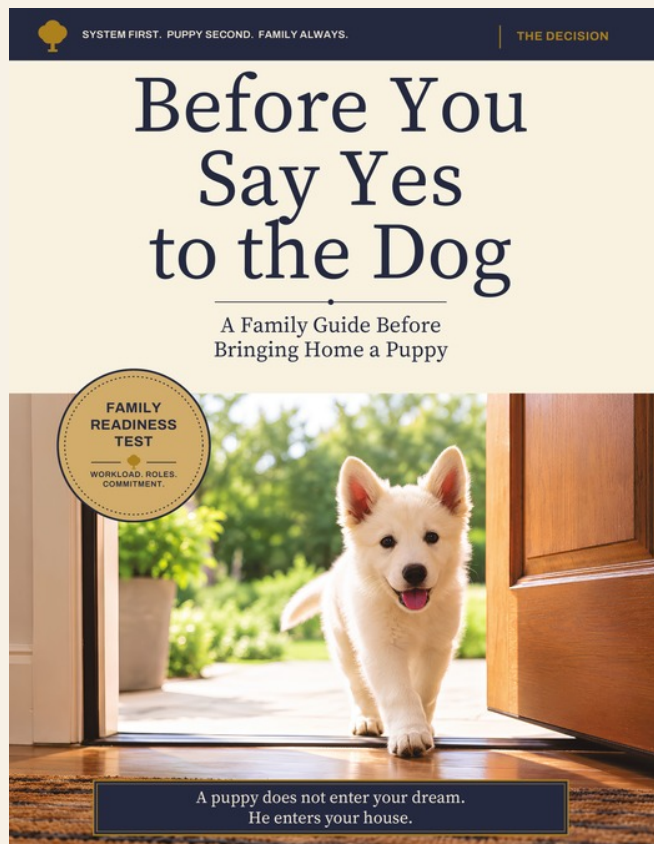

He stayed. His name is Oden.

These pages are part of that system. I am doing the thing I wished someone had done for me.

Somebody gave you this. If it was useful, it is free to pass on — and everything else is at mohamedabukhadra.com.

I wrote this for my family. Then I shared it with the people I thought might get something from it. Use it, ignore it, or write back and tell me how to make it better. Up to you.

The two books

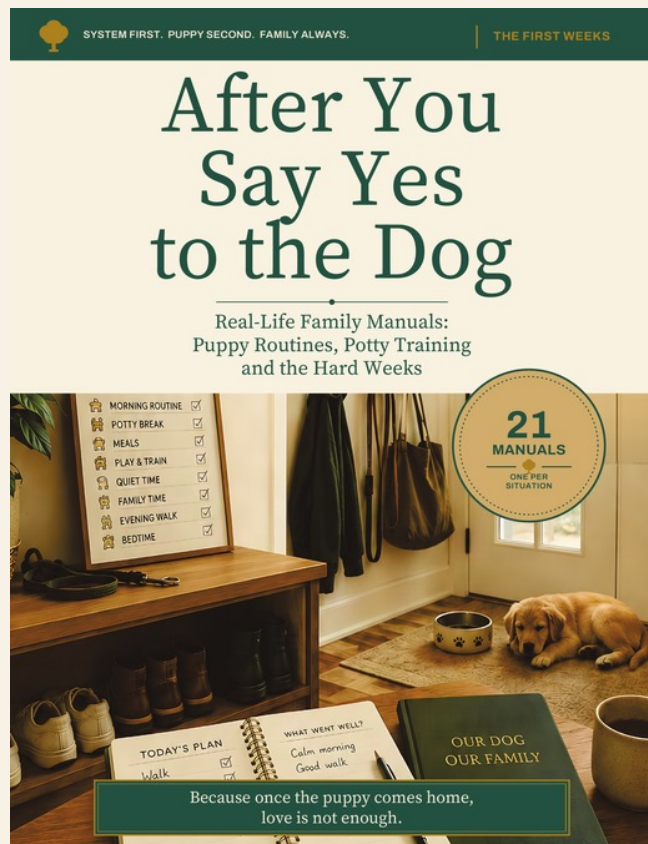

Mohamed Abu Khadra

Before You Say Yes to the Dog

A Family Guide Before Bringing Home a Puppy

The decision before the decision. The real workload before it lands on one person. Who actually does what, including the children. A real say for whoever feels least ready. It ends at a test with three answers — Let's get the puppy, Maybe later, Not for us — and each one, given honestly, is a good answer.

21 chapters. One readiness test.

Mohamed Abu Khadra

After You Say Yes to the Dog

Real-Life Family Manuals: Puppy Routines, Potty Training and the Hard Weeks

One manual per pressure moment: the first forty-eight hours, potty, socialisation, night barking, visitors, outdoor freedom, grooming, emergencies, and the reset. Printable routines you use on the day, not read about.

21 manuals. One per situation.

Read to know. Use to do.

Paperback and Kindle. mohamedabukhadra.com

THIS PACK mohamedabukhadra.com/help/associations

For professionals

I also built software for the people who do this for a living. It is called Oden, after the dog.

Oden Pet Operating System — one system with specialised tracks by profession. Canine behaviourists and dog trainers today. Shelters and rescues next, with other professions following.

oden.pet/readers · code HOUSE-ASSOC

30% off your first year, monthly or yearly. Third-party services excluded. Terms apply — see oden.pet/readers.

Not a professional yourself? Pass this code to your trainer or behaviourist.

Terms

© 2026 Mohamed Abu Khadra. All rights reserved.

This document is an extract from Before You Say Yes to the Dog and After You Say Yes to the Dog by Mohamed Abu Khadra (Oden House).

Share it as it is. Forward it as it is.

Print it, copy it, email it, hand it out — freely, at no cost. Give it to clients, families, members, students, staff. No permission needed.

Three conditions: do not sell it, or include it in anything sold · do not cut from it, extract parts, or alter it · keep it whole, with the author's name on it.

For a different format or an adapted version, write to mo@mohamedabukhadra.com. Requests from shelters, rescues and non-profit programmes are welcome and usually granted.

Disclaimer

This document is provided for general informational purposes only. It does not constitute veterinary, behavioural, training, medical, psychological, legal, or professional advice of any kind, and no professional relationship is created by reading or using it.

This document is a practical family operating and educational guide. It is designed to help families think clearly, prepare responsibly, assign roles, reduce chaos, and make better decisions before and after bringing a puppy home. It is not a substitute for professional veterinary care, medical advice, certified dog training, behaviour consultation, legal advice, or emergency judgment. It is not an obedience or training programme.

The author is not a veterinarian, animal behaviourist, dog trainer, or licensed professional in any relevant field. The material describes personal experience within one household. It has not been scientifically researched, clinically tested, peer-reviewed, or professionally validated. No representation or warranty is made, express or implied, as to its accuracy, completeness, suitability, or fitness for any purpose. Results vary by household, by animal, and by circumstance. No outcome is promised or implied.

Assumption of risk. Any decision to apply this material, in whole or in part, is made solely at the reader's own risk and discretion. The reader is responsible for their own safety and for the safety of all persons and animals in their household.

Interpersonal and household risk. This document addresses roles, responsibilities and boundaries within a household. Conversations about these matters can create disagreement or conflict. The reader is solely responsible for assessing whether raising, discussing, or attempting to implement any part of this material is safe and appropriate in their own circumstances, and for deciding not to do so. Any reader who has reason to fear an adverse, hostile, coercive, or violent reaction from any person should not use this material and should seek assistance from an appropriate qualified professional or support service.

Animal risk. Living with a dog carries inherent risks. Any dog may bite or cause injury regardless of breed, size, temperament, or training. Where a dog displays aggression, fear, guarding, or any behaviour that gives cause for concern, a certified trainer, qualified behaviourist, or veterinarian must be consulted regarding that specific animal before any action is taken. Children must never be left unsupervised with a dog.

Large-breed dogs can grow into strong, powerful animals. Adult supervision, safe handling, suitable training, and professional support are the responsibility of the family. Children should never be responsible for dangerous decisions, emergency handling, strong leash control, unknown objects, medical situations, unsafe behaviour, or bite-risk scenarios.

For health concerns, vaccination, feeding, medication, injury, illness, poisoning, breathing difficulty, collapse, bloat signs, severe fear, aggression, dangerous behaviour, bite risk, or any situation where the dog or family may be at risk, contact the appropriate qualified professional immediately.

When safety is unclear: Separate. Call. Go.

Limitation of liability. To the fullest extent permitted by law, the author and publisher exclude all liability for any loss, injury, damage, or harm of any kind — direct, indirect, consequential, physical, psychological, financial, or otherwise — arising from or connected to the use, misuse, application, or non-application of this material, or from any act or omission of any third party in response to it. By reading this document, the reader accepts these terms in full.